- 40) In Canada, pay for executives should supposedly be tied to the financial performance of the company. When executive pay is excessive relative to company performance, profits are diverted away from stockholders to the executives.
- 41) Managers have a stake in compensation: It directly influences their success in two ways: (1) compensation is a major expense, and (2) a manager uses it as a way to influence employee behaviour and consequently improve organization performance.
- 42) Total compensation and relational returns

43) The two major categories of total rewards are relational returns and total compensation. The relational returns (development opportunities, status, opportunity to belong, challenging work, and so on) are the psychological returns people believe they receive in the workplace.

Total compensation is more transactional and includes pay received directly as cash (e.g., base, merit increases, incentives, cost-of-living adjustments) and indirectly as benefits (e.g., pensions, medical insurance, programs to help balance work and life demands).

- 44) Base pay tends to reflect the value of the work or skills and generally ignores differences attributable to individual employees.
- 45) Base pay is the cash compensation an employer pays for the work performed. Base pay tends to reflect the value of the work or skills and generally ignores differences attributable to individual employees. A distinction is often made between a wage and a salary, with salary referring to pay that is calculated at a annual or monthly rate rather than hourly which is the basis for wage.
- 46) Long-term incentives are intended to focus employee efforts on multi-year results. Typically, they are in the form of stock ownership or options to buy stock at specified, advantageous prices.
- 47) A pay model contains three basic building blocks: (1) the strategic compensation objectives, (2) the strategic policies that form the foundation of the compensation system, and (3) the techniques of compensation.
- 48) Efficiency, fairness and compliance to rules and regulations.
- 49) Procedural fairness is concerned with the processes used to make decisions about pay. It suggests that the way a pay decision is made may be as important to employees as the result of the decision.
