Chapter 02

Marketing Strategy Planning

True / False Questions

Planning, implementation, and control are basic jobs of all managers.

True False

Controlling the marketing plan is the first step of the marketing management process.

True False

The three basic jobs in the marketing management process are planning, implementation, and control.

True False

The marketing management process consists of (1) planning marketing activities, (2) directing the implementation of the plans, and (3) controlling these plans.

True False

Strategic planning is a top management job that includes planning only for marketing.

True False

Strategic planning is the managerial process of developing and maintaining a match between an organization's resources and its market opportunities.

True False

Strategic (management) planning is a managerial process of developing and maintaining a match between the resources of the production department and its product opportunities.

True False

Finding attractive opportunities and developing profitable marketing strategies are the tasks included in the marketing manager's marketing strategy planning job.

True False

Marketing strategy planning is the process of deciding how best to sell the products the firm produces.

True False

A marketing strategy specifies a target market and a related marketing

mix. True False

A marketing strategy is composed of two interrelated parts—a target market and a marketing

mix. True False

A marketing strategy is composed of two interrelated parts—planning and implementation.

True False

The two parts of a marketing strategy are an attractive opportunity and a target

market. True False

A target market consists of a group of consumers who are usually quite different. True False

A marketing mix consists of the uncontrollable variables which a company puts together to satisfy a target market.

True False

Target marketing aims a marketing mix at some specific target

customers. True False

Mass marketing means focusing on some specific customers, as opposed to assuming that everyone is the same and will want whatever the firm offers.

True False

The mass marketing approach is more production-oriented than marketing-

oriented. True False

The terms mass marketing and mass marketers mean the same thing. True False

"Mass marketers" like Target usually try to aim at clearly defined target

markets. True False

The problem with target marketing is that it limits the firm to small market segments. True False

Potential customers are all alike.

True False

The four "Ps" are: Product, Promotion, Price, and Personnel.

The "four Ps" of the marketing mix are: Product, Position, Promotion, and

Price. True False

The "four Ps" of the marketing mix are: People, Products, Price, and Promotion.

True False

Product, Place, Promotion, and Price are the four major variables (decision areas) in a firm's marketing mix.

True False

The customer is a part of the marketing mix and should be the target of all marketing efforts.

True False

Although the customer should be the target of all marketing efforts, customers are not part of a marketing mix.

True False

The customer should not be considered part of a "marketing

mix." True False

The Product area is concerned with developing the right physical good, service, or blend of both for the target market.

True False

According to the text, a firm that sells a service rather than a physical good does not have a product.

The Product area of the marketing mix may involve a service and/or a physical good, which satisfies some customers' needs.

True False

The Place decisions are concerned with getting the right product to the target market at the right time.

True False

Any series of firms (or individuals) from producer to final user or consumer is a channel of distribution.

True False

A channel of distribution is any series of firms or individuals that participate in the flow of products from producer to final user or consumer.

True False

A channel of distribution must include an intermediary. True False

A channel of distribution must include several kinds of intermediaries and collaborators. True False

Personal selling, mass selling, and sales promotion are all included in the Promotion area of the marketing mix.

True False

Promotion is composed of personal selling, advertising, publicity, and sales

promotion. True False

Personal selling involves direct personal communication to get the sale, but personal attention is seldom required after the sale.

True False

Customer service is needed when a customer wants the seller to resolve a problem with a purchase.

True False

Advertising is any paid form of nonpersonal presentation of ideas, goods, or services by an identified sponsor.

True False

Sales promotion can involve point-of-purchase materials, store signs, contests, catalogs, and circulars.

True False

Sales promotion refers to those promotion activities-other than advertising, publicity, and personal selling-that stimulate interest, trial, or purchase by final customers or others in the channel.

True False

Personal selling and advertising are both forms of sales

promotion. True False

According to the text, Promotion is the most important of the "four

Ps." True False

Price is the most important of the four Ps.

In general, no single element of the "four Ps" is more important than the others. True False

The marketing mix should be set before the best target market is selected. True False

As in the Toddler University case, the needs of a target market virtually determine the nature of an appropriate marketing mix.

True False

A marketing plan and a marketing strategy mean the same thing. True False

A marketing strategy and all the time-related details for carrying out the strategy is a "marketing plan."

True False

A marketing plan is a written statement of a marketing strategy and the time-related details for carrying out the strategy.

True False

Implementation means putting the marketing plan into operation. True False

Short-run decisions that stay within the overall guidelines set during strategy planning are called implementation decisions.

Marketing strategy planning should specify all of the operational decisions to implement the plan. True False

Companies such as Campbell's can only implement one marketing strategy at a time. True False

Most companies implement only one marketing strategy at a time. True False

A marketing program blends all of the firm's marketing plans into one "big" plan and is the responsibility of the whole company.

True False

A "marketing program" blends all of a firm's marketing plans into one "big" plan.

True False

A marketing program may consist of several marketing plans. True False

A successful marketing program benefits the firm by increasing customer equity. True False

Customer lifetime value represents the total stream of purchase a customer could contribute to the company over the life of the relationship.

True False

One way to increase customer equity is to find cost-effective ways to serve current customers so they buy more.

True False

One way to increase customer equity is to find cost-effective ways to add new customers for the firm's products.

True False

The best way to increase customer equity is to find cost-effective ways to increase earnings from current customers while bringing profitable new customers into the fold.

True False

The customer equity approach guides the marketing manager to make marketing decisions that enhance the firm's short-term profits—just for the next quarter or year.

True False

Enhancing customer value by increasing their purchases is a potential source of new revenue. True False

An extremely good plan might be carried out badly and still produce profits, while a poor but well implemented plan can lose money.

True False

The U.S. auto industry has become much more marketing-oriented since Henry Ford introduced the Model T.

True False

Many U.S. automakers have failed because they were not marketing

oriented. True False

Managers who embrace the marketing concept realize that they cannot just define their line of business in terms of the products they currently produce or sell.

True False

The single most important factor in screening possible marketing opportunities is the long-run trends facing the company.

True False

Attractive opportunities for a particular firm are those that the firm has some chance of doing something about-given its resources and objectives.

True False

A "breakthrough opportunity" is an opportunity that helps innovators develop long-term, hard-to-copy marketing strategies that will be very profitable.

True False

"Breakthrough opportunities" are ones that help innovators develop hard-to-copy marketing strategies that will be profitable for a long time.

True False

A firm with a "competitive advantage" has a marketing mix that the target market sees as better than a competitor's mix.

True False

Finding "competitive advantages" is important because they are needed for survival in increasingly competitive markets.

True False

It is useful to think of the marketing strategy planning process as a narrowing-down process.

True False

The marketing strategy planning process starts with a narrow look at a market, and becomes broader the closer the firm comes to developing a marketing mix.

True False

There are usually more different strategy possibilities than a firm can pursue. True False

Developing a set of specific qualitative and quantitative screening criteria can help a manager define in which business and markets the firm wants to compete.

True False

A S.W.O.T. analysis is one way to zero in on a marketing strategy that is well-suited to the firm. True False

A S.W.O.T. analysis identifies the "special weapons or tactics" used by the competitor in a product-market that has the most profitable marketing mix.

True False

S.W.O.T. analysis is based on the idea that one of the best ways to develop a strategy is to identify and copy the marketing "strategies, weapons, outlook, and tactics" of the firm's most effective competitor.

True False

A good S.W.O.T. analysis helps a manager focus on a strategy that takes advantages of the firm's opportunities and strengths while avoiding its weaknesses and threats to its success.

True False

Segmentation is the process a manager goes through to decide which subgroups of customers to select.

True False

Differentiation means that the marketing mix is distinct from and better than what is available from a competitor.

True False

Differentiation means that the firm's marketing mix is similar to its competitors'

mixes. True False

Differentiation often requires a firm to fine-tune its marketing mix to meet the specific needs of its target market(s).

True False

Differentiation emphasizes uniqueness rather than similarity. True False

uniqueness. True False

The external market environment doesn't play a role in the marketing strategy planning process because it exists outside of the company.

True False

It is useful to think of the marketing strategy planning process as a process that begins with a narrow focus but then broadens to embrace unlimited opportunities and options.

True False

The first two letters in the S.W.O.T. analysis help managers examine customers, competition, and the external marketing environment.

True False

The last two letters in the S.W.O.T. refer to "opportunities" and "threats" related to factors outside the company, including customers, competition, and the external marketing environment.

True False

Marketing opportunities involving present products and present markets are called "market penetration" opportunities.

True False

Market penetration means trying to increase sales of a firm's present products in its present markets-probably through a more aggressive marketing mix.

True False

A firm that tries to increase sales by selling new products in new markets is pursuing "market development" opportunities.

True False

A "market development" opportunity would involve a firm offering new or improved products to its present markets.

True False

When a firm tries to increase sales by offering new or improved products to its present markets, this is called "product development."

True False

Nike moved beyond shoes and sportswear to offer its athletic target market a running watch, digital audio player, and even a portable heart-rate monitor. This is an example of a market development strategy.

True False

The ArrowPoint Company has just modified and enlarged its product line to meet the changing needs of its current customers. This is an example of "market development."

True False

When Cadillac added a new sports utility vehicle called Escalade to the "luxury-oriented" selection at its existing dealers, it was seeking "market development" opportunities.

True False

If Burger King added tacos to the "burger-oriented" menu in its existing restaurants, it would be seeking "market development" opportunities.

True False

Marketing opportunities that involve moving into totally different lines of business are "diversification" opportunities.

True False

The least risky-but most challenging-marketing opportunities are diversification opportunities. True False

Often, attractive opportunities are fairly close to markets the firm already knows. True False

When it comes to choosing among different types of opportunities, most firms tend to be production-oriented and usually think first of diversification.

True False

Of the four types of opportunities firms can pursue, diversification is the easiest to evaluate and involves the least risk.

True False

A significant emerging middle class consumer segment in a country is a strong opportunity for brands to shift focus toward it.

True False

Advances in e-commerce, transportation, and communications have had little impact on creating international opportunities.

True False

If customers in other countries are interested in the products a firm offers, or could offer, serving them may improve economies of scale.

True False

Unfavorable trends in the domestic market environment may make the international marketing environment very attractive.

International opportunities should be considered in the strategy planning process, but they don't always survive as the most attractive ones that are turned into strategies.

True False

Marketing managers usually find that opportunities in international markets are less profitable than in domestic markets.

True False

When a firm's domestic market is prosperous, marketing managers are less likely to pursue opportunities in international markets.

True False

The basic reason to focus on some specific target customers instead of all possible customers is so that managers can develop a marketing mix that satisfies those customers' specific needs better than they are satisfied by some other firm.

True False

Multiple Choice Questions

The three basic tasks of ALL managers, according to the text, are:

planning, staffing, and evaluating.

marketing, production, and finance.

execution, feedback, and control.

hiring, training, and compensating.

planning, implementation, and control.

Controlling is vital to the marketing management process because:

- marketing managers need to control their subordinates.
- controlling examines a firm's strengths, weaknesses, opportunities, and threats.
- gathering feedback on a plan's results may lead to beneficial adjustments or entirely new plans.
- controlling involves identifying a target market.
- controlling is part of the marketing mix.

Which of the following duties would not be performed by a firm's marketing managers?

- Planning activities
- Directing the implementation of plans

These women represent Herbal Essences' primary:

- marketing strategy.
- 4 Ps.
- target market.
- marketing mix.
- channel of distribution.

Target marketing, in contrast to mass marketing:

- Assumes all customers have the same needs.
- Assumes everyone is a potential customer.
- Focuses only on small market segments.
- Tailors a marketing mix to fit some specific group of customers.
- Makes it more likely that a firm will face direct competition.

Which of the following statements about target marketing is incorrect?

Target marketing is not mass marketing.

Mass marketers like Kraft and Walmart may conduct target marketing.

Target marketing is not limited to small market segments.

Target marketing assumes that everyone is different and specifies some particular target customers.

Target marketing is associated with the typical production-oriented approach that aims at everyone with the same marketing mix.

The difference between target marketing and mass marketing is that target marketing means focusing on a small market.

focuses on short-run objectives, while mass marketing focuses on long-run objectives.

focuses on specific customers, while mass marketing aims at an entire market.

does not rely on e-commerce but mass marketing does.

aims at increased sales, while mass marketing focuses on increased profits.

"Price":

is affected by the kind of competition in the target market.

includes markups and discounts, but not allowances and freight charges.

is not affected by customer reactions.

is the most important part of a marketing mix.

The Price area of the marketing mix:

requires consideration of the cost of the marketing mix and the competition facing the firm when setting prices.

does not involve estimating consumer reaction to possible prices.

refers to any paid form of nonpersonal presentation of ideas, goods, or services by an identified sponsor.

does not include the consideration of geographic terms in price setting.

None of these is correct.

When developing a marketing mix, a marketing manager should remember that:

"Promotion" includes only personal selling and publicity.

A channel of distribution includes at least one intermediary.

"Price" includes markups, discounts, allowances, and geographic terms.

"Product" includes physical goods but not services.

Of the four types of opportunities firms can pursue, market penetration often appeals to marketers because:

- it requires the creation of new products.
- it involves selling current products in familiar markets.
- it involves selling current products in unfamiliar markets.
- it doesn't require a more effective use of the marketing mix.
- it is guaranteed to succeed.

Since firms prefer opportunities close to markets they already know, most managers pursue greater market penetration, which involves selling current products in familiar markets.

Market penetration is appealing because firms want to increase profits and grow customer equity where they already have experience and strengths.

The most risky and challenging opportunities usually involve:

market development.

product development.

diversification.

market penetration.

All of these are similar in terms of risk.

Diversification means moving into totally different lines of business, perhaps entirely unfamiliar products, markets, or even levels in the production-marketing system. Products and customers that are very different from a firm's current base may look attractive but are usually hard to evaluate. That's why diversification usually involves the biggest risk.

Going global has become easier than ever for marketers due to:

language differences between nations.

cultural differences among ethnic groups around the world.

advances in e-commerce, transportation, and communication.

political and social unrest in various parts of the world.

worldwide economic recession.

Advances in e-commerce, transportation, and communications are making it easier and cheaper to reach international customers. With a website and e-mail, even the smallest firm can provide international customers with a great deal of information-and easy ways to order-at very little expense.
