ESSAY

1. How did international trade affect the rise and fall of the Roman Empire?

ANS:

One of the major world powers in ancient history was the Roman Empire. Its impact on thought, knowledge, and development can still be felt today. Even while expanding their territories through armed conflicts, the Romans placed primary emphasis on encouraging international business activities. The principal approaches used to implement this emphasis were the Pax Romana, or the Roman Peace, and common coinage. The Pax Romana ensured that merchants were able to travel safely on roads. The common coinage ensured that business transactions could be carried out easily throughout the empire. The immense growth of the Roman Empire occurred through the linkages of business rather than through the marching of its legions and warfare. When the outside tribes attacked the empire, the Roman empire was already substantially weakened, because former allies no longer saw any advantage in being associated with the Romans and willingly cooperated with the invaders. This indicates that international trade played a major role in world history, especially with the Roman Empire.

2. Explain the significance of the World Bank.

ANS:

The World Bank's official name is the International Bank for Reconstruction and Development. It was formed in 1944 to aid countries suffering from the destruction of war. After completing this process most successfully, it has since taken on the task of aiding world development. With new nations emerging from the colonial fold of the world powers of the early twentieth century, the bank has made major efforts to assist fledgling economies to participate in a modern economic trade framework. More recently, the bank has begun to participate actively with the IMF to resolve the debt problems of the developing world and to bring a market economy to the former members of the Eastern bloc.Major debates surround the effectiveness of the bank's expenditures.

The World Bank tries now to reorient its outlook, focusing more on capacity building and the development of human capital through investments into education and health. Key performance criteria are now the sustainability of growth and development, addressing higher commodity prices, agricultural assistance in times of higher food prices, opening world trade to all countries, and greater participation of rising economic powers and developing nations in the bank's governance. As it approaches its major challenge of reducing global poverty, the World Bank "delivers technical, financial, and other assistance to those most in need and where it can have the greatest impact and promote growth: to the poorest countries, fragile states, and the Arab World; to middle-income countries; to solving global public goods issues; and to delivering knowledge and learning services."

3. Describe the significance of export promotion efforts.

ANS:

Many countries provide export promotion assistance to their firms. Key reasons for such assistance are the national need to earn foreign currency, the encouragement of domestic employment, and the increase in domestic economic activity. Many forms of export promotion can be seen as government distortion of trade because government support simply results in a subsidization of profitability or reduction of risk. Yet there are instances where such intervention may be justified. Government support can be appropriate if it annuls unfair foreign practices, increases market transparency and therefore contributes to the better functioning of markets, or helps overcome, in the interest of long-term national competitiveness, the short-term orientation of firms.

The U.S. Department of Commerce provides companies with an array of data on foreign trade and marketing developments. Its Commercial Service provides a link with U.S. businesses in terms of information flow and market assistance. Efforts are made to coordinate the activities of diverse federal agencies. An official interagency advocacy network was created that helps U.S. companies win overseas contracts for large government purchases abroad. A variety of agencies now collaborate in order to continue to improve services to U.S. exporters. Many countries also provide substantial levels of private-sector support. A new focus has come about in the area of export financing. Policymakers have increasingly recognized that U.S. business may be placed at a disadvantage if it cannot meet the subsidized financing rates of foreign suppliers. The Export-Import Bank of the United States, charged with the mission of aggressively meeting foreign export-financing conditions, has in recent years even resorted to offering mixed aid credits. The bank has also launched a major effort to reach out to smaller-sized businesses and assist in their export success. Tax legislation that inhibited the employment of Americans by U.S. firms abroad has also been altered to be more favorable to U.S. firms. One other export-promotion development was the passage of the Export Trading Company Act of 1982. Intended to be the U.S. response to Japanese sogoshoshas, or international trading firms, this legislation permits firms to work together to form export consortia. The basic idea was to provide the foreign buyer with a one-stop shopping center in which a group of U.S. firms could offer a variety of complementary and competitive products. By exempting U.S. firms from current antitrust statutes, and by permitting banks to cooperate in the formation of these ventures through direct capital participation and the financing of trading activities, the government hoped that more firms could participate in the international marketplace.
